

Our team has been communicating via email throughout the past week as we collaborated on GoogleDocs to finalize our survey. Cindy Mako-Robinson continues to act as our liaison to our SME as we move forward on our project.

We held our weekly Collaborate meeting last night to identify the specific items our project will address. Our task for the upcoming week will be to work together on GoogleDocs to solidify the "story board" for our project and to identify further the specific content that each section will contain. We will each take responsibility to complete a portion of the in-depth content research, and are planning to meet in person immediately after spring break to begin to put all of the pieces together.

From the "hurdle" standpoint, it has been a bit difficult to connect with and receive feedback from our SME. Additionally, our individual schedules this week and next preclude face-to-face meetings, although it seems that our scheduling issues will resolve themselves after the Spring Break cycle. With that being said, our group continues to work well together, and we are looking forward to getting to the more "creative" part of our project!
